Sanger Elementary Sanger students duct tape principal Alfredo Turrubiates as a reward for reaching their goal of raising $1,500 for the Pennies for Patients campaign.

“Lauren Pallanes and her fellow schoolmates were rewarded with an assembly for exceeding their goal of raising $1,500 for Pennies for Patients campaign. If they reached their goal, the students were awarded the chance to duct tape their principal to the wall. Each student received a piece of duct tape to begin with and each additional piece of tape was $1.”

Pennies for Patients is a campaign where students collect pennies and loose change to benefit the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society.

The students, encouraged by Turrubiates, collected change from their parents, securing underneath sofa cushions and the cup holders in their parent’s vehicles. With a student body of 386, Turrubiates said it was a successful event.

“If they reached their goal, they were allowed to duct tape our principal, Alfredo Turrubiates,” Pallanes said. “We had about $1,500, and we duct taped him.”
