Eunice fire gets interim chief

By LEVI HILL

Eunice has been without a full-time fire chief since Dec. 28 when then-chief Ron Grogan retired. Grogan also made headlines earlier this year when he was accused of any misconduct for allegedly touching a medicated woman’s breast during a May 23 ambulance run. He was cleared of any misconduct by a state hearing officer last month.

Grogan is one of five firefighters accused of stealing or misusing city vehicles on Dec. 6 and then conspiring to cover up the theft, charged with burglary, conspiracy to tamper with evidence is suspected.

Eunice’s Fire Department chief, assistant chief David Walser will head the department.

While announcing his fifth campaign for mayor, Calderon said the condemnation of a house at 26th and Division streets and drainage.

“Before it would take an act of Congress to get fencing down,” he said. “But now, when I do home visits, it’s the same thing. I usually see it and say ‘I’ll fix this or that’. Just please, don’t just leave it. I think the city for cleaning up its act.”

Calderon said the condemnation efforts have also impacted his personal crusade against graffiti in Hobbs.

Joe Calderon seeking fifth term

BETH HAN

Calderon, who turns 68 later this month, said he will continue to work for Hobbes residents “as long as my health and the state legislature doesn’t pull my name in the computer to go.”

For the past year, Calderon has been commuting to Brownfield, Texas, to teach Spanish. He retired from teaching in New Mexico.

As a teacher, Calderon said he likes to constantly learn new things, which helps him be a better commissioner.

“I want to be an inspired people for doing the good things as opposed to punishing them for doing the bad things,” Daniel said in response to her stance the regulations in the new Pit Rule. “I don’t say let them come all out, but let’s come and see how we can be more friendly.”

Danieil recently met with 15 oil and gas industry representatives and a fraternity that one size does not fit all,” but she feels there is a way to make everyone happy and environment friendly together.

Denish also pointed a finger at the industry , saying it has to be responsible for the protection of the environment.

“I want to incentivize people for doing the good things as opposed to punishing them for doing the bad things,” Daniel said in response to her stance the regulations in the new Pit Rule. “I don’t say let them come all out, but let’s come and see how we can be more friendly.”

Even as oil and gas prices begin to climb, Denish said the state and the industry cannot be lulled into a sense of security.

“With new shale discoveries, we are going to have new jobs and stimulation to the local economy,” the chairman said.

“Influence much-needed stimulus into our economy,” SHARE told attendees.

“(It’s a) huge little bitty clinic hospital,”onders said after the groundbreaking.

“The irony was not lost on the audience who braved some of the chilliest weather all year to attend the event on Thursday”.

“The new $2.5 million Animal Adoption Center, The new animal control ordi- nances. The current $811,000 remodel of the Agnes Kastner-Head Community Center.

Citywide improvements to streets and drainage.

“With new shale discoveries, we are going to have new jobs and stimulation to the local economy,” Denish said.

The expansion, which will add about 25,000-35,000 square feet will be completed in 2013. The new neurology clinic and cardiology center.

The facility itself will be completed in 2014. The construction work will employ about 150 people at it’s peak, reviews to the city.

“It will influence much-needed stimulus into our economy,” SHARE told attendees.

“(It’s a) huge little bitty clinic hospital,” Daniers said after the groundbreaking.

“Now, we will be able to complete this project without incurring any debt,” he said after the groundbreaking.

SHARE said completing the project without incurring debt was one of three main goals for the new facility.

SHARE told attendees the hospital also wanted to make outpatient and emergency room services more convenient and provide new services to Eunice County that currently don’t exist.

The expansion, which will add about 25,000-35,000 square feet will have a central registration area. Parking will also be increased by 50 spaces to meet the new demand.

The facility will also include a new mammography and imaging center. The hospital will also move its MRI unit, which is currently in a mobile unit, inside the building. The new unit, which will also be upgraded from a four slice unit to a 16 slice unit, SHARE said.

Even as oil and gas prices begin to climb, Denish said the state and the industry cannot be lulled into a sense of security.

“With new shale discoveries, we are going to have new jobs and stimulation to the local economy,” the chairman said.

“The irony was not lost on the audience who braved some of the chilliest weather all year to attend the event on Thursday”.

“The new $2.5 million Animal Adoption Center, The new animal control ordi- nances. The current $811,000 remodel of the Agnes Kastner-Head Community Center.

Citywide improvements to streets and drainage.

“With new shale discoveries, we are going to have new jobs and stimulation to the local economy,” Denish said.

The expansion, which will add about 25,000-35,000 square feet will be completed in 2014. The new neurology clinic and cardiology center.

The facility itself will be completed in 2014. The construction work will employ about 150 people at it’s peak, reviews to the city.

“It will influence much-needed stimulus into our economy,” SHARE told attendees.

“(It’s a) huge little bitty clinic hospital,” Daniers said after the groundbreaking.

“Now, we will be able to complete this project without incurring any debt,” he said after the groundbreaking.

SHARE said completing the project without incurring debt was one of three main goals for the new facility.

SHARE told attendees the hospital also wanted to make outpatient and emergency room services more convenient and provide new services to Eunice County that currently don’t exist.

The expansion, which will add about 25,000-35,000 square feet will have a central registration area. Parking will also be increased by 50 spaces to meet the new demand.

The facility will also include a new mammography and imaging center. The hospital will also move its MRI unit, which is currently in a mobile unit, inside the building. The new unit, which will also be upgraded from a four slice unit to a 16 slice unit, SHARE said.

Inside Today

Oblivious

Dr. Joe Calderon

Sizing/Stocks

For Sale

Cars & Game

Oil Prices

Eunice Eunice

Denish on Pit Rule, new taxes

BETH HAN

“I want to incentivize people for doing the good things as opposed to punishing them for doing the bad things,” Daniel said in response to her stance the regulations in the new Pit Rule. “I don’t say let them come all out, but let’s come and see how we can be more friendly.”

Denish recently met with 15 oil and gas industry representatives and a fraternity that one size does not fit all,” but she feels there is a way to make everyone happy and environment friendly together.

Denish also pointed a finger at the industry , saying it has to be responsible for the protection of the environment.

“The industry has the responsibility to come to the table with the best,” she said. “Even as oil and gas prices begin to climb, Denish said the state and the industry cannot be lulled into a sense of security.”

“With new shale discoveries, we are going to have new jobs and stimulation to the local economy,” the chairman said.

“The irony was not lost on the audience who braved some of the chilliest weather all year to attend the event on Thursday”.

“The new $2.5 million Animal Adoption Center, The new animal control ordi- nances. The current $811,000 remodel of the Agnes Kastner-Head Community Center.

Citywide improvements to streets and drainage.

“With new shale discoveries, we are going to have new jobs and stimulation to the local economy,” Denish said.

The expansion, which will add about 25,000-35,000 square feet will be completed in 2014. The new neurology clinic and cardiology center.

The facility itself will be completed in 2014. The construction work will employ about 150 people at it’s peak, reviews to the city.

“It will influence much-needed stimulus into our economy,” SHARE told attendees.

“(It’s a) huge little bitty clinic hospital,” Daniers said after the groundbreaking.

“Now, we will be able to complete this project without incurring any debt,” he said after the groundbreaking.

SHARE said completing the project without incurring debt was one of three main goals for the new facility.

SHARE told attendees the hospital also wanted to make outpatient and emergency room services more convenient and provide new services to Eunice County that currently don’t exist.

The expansion, which will add about 25,000-35,000 square feet will have a central registration area. Parking will also be increased by 50 spaces to meet the new demand.

The facility will also include a new mammography and imaging center. The hospital will also move its MRI unit, which is currently in a mobile unit, inside the building. The new unit, which will also be upgraded from a four slice unit to a 16 slice unit, SHARE said.