Law enforcement officers' salaries in Hobbs are poised to increase as City Commissioners are prepared to vote on a new incentive package for those who stay with the Hobbs Municipal Police Department 10 years.

The city department currently has 10 SWAT volunteers, but needs more bilingual officers and SWAT volunteers.

Hobbs Police Chief Chris McCall presented on Wednesday a new incentive package that offers $1,500 annually for bilingual officers and SWAT volunteers. McCall said the department currently has 10 SWAT volunteers, but needs more because SWAT volunteers are on call 24-7 and sometimes officers can work nights or days off might not be available when needed.

The commissioners unanimously approved the increased pay for officers who volunteer for the SWAT Team and be bilingual thanks to SWAT volunteers. Hobbs police officers will be getting a $1,500 annual bonus if they are receiving a $1,500 annual bonus if they are bilingual. The city staff will be getting a $1,500 annual bonus irrespective of their bilingual status.

The city staff in general will also be receiving a $2,300 annual bonus if they can pass a bilingual certification.
